Notes on "The Soul of a New Machine" by Tracy Kidder

J. Jason Bell

July 25, 2013

Here I seek to record points worth remembering from the book.

1. The four rules of Data General's Eagle Team:

    (a) Compete for resources.

    (b) Work Faster than the competition (in this case another group in the same company was the competition.)

    (c) "Sign-up." Basically this is a Law of Consecration applied to work.

    (d) Reward! The payoff for success is big and awesome.

2. West and Alsing: driven, visionary politician and brilliant, shy, genius team up. Reminds me of Jobs and Wozniak.